

Executive Bio

Baudelaire K. Ulysse, EdD, MBA, MS, MDiv., is an educational leader, author, and workforce strategist with over 18 years of experience across higher education, curriculum development, and organizational leadership. His work sits at the intersection of teaching and learning, workforce alignment, and institutional effectiveness, with a focus on designing systems that improve student outcomes while responding to evolving economic and societal demands.

Dr. Ulysse has taught extensively in higher education, developing and delivering curriculum grounded in engagement, rigor, and measurable learning outcomes. His experience extends beyond academia into operational leadership, where he has designed and implemented training systems, performance frameworks, and data-informed strategies to support workforce development and organizational performance.

He is the President of OrganoSys Corp and OrganoSys Media Group, where he leads consulting, training, publishing, and digital strategy initiatives. He is also the founder and Editor-in-Chief of Fox Valley Review, a regional publication dedicated to education, culture, and community engagement across the Fox Valley region.

Dr. Ulysse holds a Doctor of Education (EdD), a Master of Business Administration (MBA), and a Master of Science in Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning. His interdisciplinary background informs his work in advancing thoughtful, ethical, and effective integration of emerging technologies into education and organizational practice.